An Englishman by name of Hardwick came to the United States in the year of 1833. He settled in what is now known as Avon Township. He built this early American type home in 1833. The brick came from Pennsylvania, and the glass, of the kind that the person on the inside can look out, but the one on the outside cannot look in, was sent via the oxen team and took thirty days in journey. Very little is known of the rest of the history of this house as there are no living descendants.

Mr. J. Hurst lived in this house for a decade before he built his own home. After he moved, this house was used as a grainery for some years by a farmer who lived across the road. In the last twenty years it has deteriorated to the extent that it is to be razed.

The interior mantels, trim, etc., are in excellent preservation, and are made of white wood. All mouldings, studing, and lath are hand-cut.
